Data Protection & the GDPR

The introduction of the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) in May 2018 requires companies to record and monitor data protection training for employees and this is a vital aspect of evidencing that a company is complying with the GDPR.

Target audience
The course provides a practical application of the GDPR explaining the best practice processes and procedures that are required to be followed when handling personal data.

Course structure
Everyone needs to understand the care they need to take when handling personal data.

- The course contains 8 Units covering:
    - An overview of the GDPR
    - Information and Cyber security
    - Data access, handling and records management
    - The risks of mobile working
    - Employee responsibilities under the GDPR
    - Incident management and disaster recovery
- 8 Assessments test a student's knowledge
- Certificate of completion proves the legal training requirements have been met

Access per staff member only £12.50
